CAROLANA

THE UNIVERSITY OF SOUTH CAROLINA
SPARTANBURG CAMPUS

1969
vol. I

FOREWORD

In this very important year in the still short history of our school, the staff of the Carolana wishes to give special thanks to the community of Spartanburg for its support. During a time when USC-S has had no campus of its own, individuals and organizations throughout the city have offered the use of their facilities. For this cooperation the students of USC-S are humbly grateful.

Next fall with the completion of its first new building USC-S will be firmly installed on its own campus. However, it is hoped that the ties between the university and the people of Spartanburg will not be reduced but will be allowed to grow. In response to the hospitality which has been extended to the university by the citizens of this area, USC-S pledges itself to an ever-widening program of service.

DEDICATION

The yearbook staff, on behalf of the faculty, the administration, and the students, proudly dedicates our annual to the man responsible for the smooth operation and steady growth of the University of South Carolina at Spartanburg. His devotion to the school has been an inspiration to all of us. Whenever there was a basketball game, he was there. Whenever there was a truck to be unloaded, he was there. Whenever there was a student with failing grades or faltering spirit, he was there. Whenever anyone needed a helping hand, our director Dr. Norbert Stirzaker was there.

OUR CAMPUS . . .
THE PIEDMONT

Assisting us immeasurably in our rapid growth and expansion is the County Commission. Be it designing new educational facilities, explaining the operation of a Bunsen burner, or conducting a public hearing, these men have shouldered the task of translating our dreams into reality.

The university at Spartanburg is also fortunate in its relationship to the main campus in Columbia. Lending us a helping hand, presiding on dignified occasions, and correlating our efforts with those of the university are Dr. Thomas F. Jones, president; Dr. William H. Patterson, provost; and Dr. John J. Duffy, assistant provost for the regional campus system.

While we were awaiting the completion of our new building,

the old county health building
became our temporary home.

But the architects were also busy,

and the final plans took shape.

Meanwhile, fall registration was completed, and the learning process continued uninterrupted.

For many of our students who divided their time between the hospital and the classroom the days began early . . .

and ended late.

Some students combined business and pleasure by congregating in the Roost . . .

while others found the quiet solitude of the library to be the best place to study.

However, none of us became dull from all work and no play.

Finally, the big day arrived,

and the dignitaries gathered for the ground-breaking.

Soon, the steel reached into the heavens, and USC-S was building with bricks as well as with scholarship.

ADMINISTRATION

AND

FACULTY

Be it in economics, in nursing, or in any of a thousand different areas of study, the faculty of USC-S is responsible for guiding us in our desire to become well-educated and to obtain a successful position in life. The students are aware of the concern, the time, and the understanding which every faculty and staff member contributes to our total education, and we humbly thank them for sharing their knowledge and experience with us.

ENGLISH, our national language and a proud heritage, provides a key not only to the past but to the future as well. Hidden between the covers of books are the thoughts of those countless numbers who went before, and these thoughts are the foundation for knowledge to come. To the English professors we express our gratitude for teaching us to read with mature understanding and to communicate effectively and coherently.

LANGUAGE professors are those widely-traveled and interesting people who guide us through the complicated grammar and vocabulary of another language until it becomes a traveling companion. Along the way we develop a deeper understanding of other countries and other people with different beliefs and traditions.

SOCIAL STUDIES allows us to venture back through the ages to discover what made our ancestors succeed or fail and by so doing to mold our plans for the future. Napoleon, Washington, Freud, Columbus . . . these are the people who live among us today, and these are the professors who help us to encounter them in ourselves.

MATH has become within the last generation one of the most complex and useful of the sciences. Today college math exposes the student to far more than basic algebra and arithmetic. While an understanding of math helps us make change, keep a budget, or balance a checkbook, the math professors go even further by teaching us the principles which will build the skyscrapers and Apollo 8's of tomorrow.

CLASSES

Student life at USC is not all work, but an endless round of study and fun. There are, of course, those troublesome in-class English themes; but between classes the Roost is the center for marathon bridge games as well as last minute cram sessions.

ORGANIZATIONS

School organizations provide the students with the opportunity to become leaders, to put original ideas into effect, and to work beside others with similar interests and enjoyments. Through school clubs the students of USC-S have learned to exchange ideas and a laugh or two, and to help the school function as a college.

ATHLETICS

Athletics play an important role in the life of our school. This year we were represented in athletic competition by our basketball, golf, and tennis teams. And from the pre-game huddle to the final gun, our young men were enthusiastically supported by our dedicated cheerleaders, who were always there with a yell or a shoulder to cry on. Whatever we may have lacked in tradition and experience, we made up for by hearts full of school spirit.

BASKETBALL . . .

Characterized by never-ending pride and well-mannered sportsmanship, the USC-S basketball team represented the school well this year. It gave the students something to cheer for and something to be proud of. Win or lose, the Bantams, who lived up to their scrappy name, were a force to be reckoned with.

GOLF . . .

Unlike other sportsmen, golfers — those sunburned gentlemen of the green — pursue the low score. Afternoons find the USC-S golfers battling hooks and slices at the Peach Valley Country Club course, where they practice free of charge. Under the discerning eye of Coach Hammock, they have shown steady improvement from locker room, to sand trap, to 18th hole.

TENNIS . . .

In the spring cries of 15 and 30 love fill the air. Not the mating calls of thousands of Ft. Lauderdale-bound students, these shouts signal the opening of the tennis season. This year a large coeducational squad showed up for the first practice. Although the women could not officially participate in matches, the men's team unanimously agreed that the first drill was by far the most enjoyable of the year.

FEATURES

Students come to the university seeking the opportunity to broaden their education and to lay the foundations of success. However, some of them bring more than ambition. With them come leadership, spirit, imagination and beauty. These are the students who make college a more meaningful experience for everyone.
